Psychology Department, Universidad Católica de Chile
Visiting Professor

Paula Luengo Kanacri is a professor of developmental psychology and methodology in the Psychology School at the P. Universidad Católica de Chile. Her research, guided by developmental, social and longitudinal approaches, focuses on understanding how individual and contextual factors interact over time to explain positive youth development. In particular, her work seeks to apply developmental science to the dynamic study of prosocial behaviors and civic engagement in a manner that reduces social disparities and, in turn, promotes social inclusion and cohesion. Paula Luengo Kanacri has successfully collaborated with school districts for over 11 years in Italy, Colombia, and Chile to design and implement longitudinal, school-based interventions to promote and assess prosociality and cohesive citizenship across adolescence.
